“ I know most people know only of Tony's good side but he had another side. At recess another side would come out. Tony was not allergy to poison oak and he knew I was. Whenever he got a handful of that wicked weed he would chase me and he enjoyed it. He would never get tired of be running and laughing. One afternoon I went home with him to play. But, as I found out before play chores had to be done. Milking a cow that sounds like fun. I said tony how do you do that. He said come a little closer and I will show you how it is done. Well I never learned since there was a white fluid all over my face. Again he laughed. I went fishing with Tony and Roger Norris. I would stand between the two never get a bite while they were reeling them in. Tony was a better that good friend. He was the type of friend that your mom would say if you can count your friends on one hand you are lucky. Tony was that kind of friend.I expect that he is smiling now and that when we meet again he will be smiling. Hope there is no poison oak in Heaven. Joe Williams
