“ I remember when Jakob was born and she was so hoping to hold him first, and as I realized this was very important to her, I stepped back so her desire would become reality. What was really precious was that as a newborn, Jakob stopped crying as she took him in her arms.

She had the gift of hospitality too. Everytime we visited, she would fix something to eat for her guests.

I will miss my friend and co-Grandma. My sympathies to all of her family.
